NEW YORK - Gary Hart, making his first public appearance since a press report accused him of spending the night with a young roman, denounced the story Tuesday as "misleading and false" and wowed to continue his campaign for the presidency. Mr. Hart conceded that he had put himself into situation that "could be misconstrued" but said that he had not done "anything immoral "It hurt my family and other innocent people," he said of the report, first published in The Mimi Herald

Mr. Hart, the leading contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, said at a meeting of sewspaper publishers that the story nted "inaccurate conclusions" based on "spotty surveil-iance." He had been scheduled in address the group before the story was published.

Some Republican and Democratic politicians said Monday that Mr. Hart's presidential campaign was in peril as a result of the newspaper report.

"Did I make a mistake by putting myself in circumstances that could be misconstrued? Of course I did. That goes without saying," Mr. Hart said Tuesday. "Did I do any-thing immoral? I absolutely did not."

The Herald reported Sunday that Mr. Hart, 50, and Donna Rice, 29, had spent Friday night and most of Saturday together at his Washington town house while his wife, Lee, was in Denver. The newspaper had assigned reporters to stake out the town house following what it said was an anonymous

Mr. Hart had told The Herald on Saturday that he had no "personal relationship" with Ms. Rice and denied he spent Friday night with anyone at his home.

Political analysts in Washington said Monday that Mr. Hart's statement to the publishers' group would be pivotal to his hopes for the White House, Representative Jim Wright of Texas, the speaker of the House of paper Publishers Association. He said that the Herald reporters Democrats in Congress willing to inad "refused to interview the very comment publicly Monday on the

"It feeds the talk of him as a man who courts danger," said William Schneider, a specialist in American politics and a fellow of the American Enterprise Institute, a public policy organization in Washington. "It doesn't raise questions so much about morality as about his judgment.

Significant questions remained about the incident as it was reported Sunday in The Herald and as it has been explained by Mr. Hart and his associates.

The major point of contention was whether the reporters who staked out Mr. Hart's town house had missed the departure of the young woman. The Hart camp says that Ms. Rice, a television actress

Barbie's Prosecutors Agree on a Strategy

They Hope to Avert a Trial of the Resistance

By Julian Nundy

al Herald Tribune PARIS - In November, 1943, the World War II allies, meeting in Moscow, vowed to follow Nazi war criminals "to the attermost ends of the Earth."

At that time, a middle-ranking Schutzstoffel officer was carving out the reputation that was, nearly 40 years later, to earn his expulsion from exile in Bolivia and a flight back to his wartime base, the central French city of Lyon.

On Monday, the former SS captain Klans Barbie, known as the "butcher of Lyon," will sitbehind a glass screen in the city's main courtroom for what certainly will be the most spectacular trial in modern France and probably the country's last major war crimes case.

About 3,000 people are expected to converge on the city for the trial, and the courthouse in Lyon, the city considered the center of resistance against the Germans, has been remodeled for the occasion.

Barbie, 73, was sentenced to death twice in the 1950s in his absence for specific war crimes. France's statute of limitations rendered these sentences ineffective after 20 years.

Now, he faces the charge of "crimes against bumanity," a charge used to cover genocide and racial persecution to which no statute of limitations applies. With capital punishment abolished in France, he faces a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

It is a trial in which Barbie's defense counsel, Jacques Verges, has threatened to confront the French with their own record of collaboration with the Nazi occupiers.

But, as the trial approaches, Barbie's accusdoes not succeed.

Henri Amouroux, wrote after Barbie's return to France in February 1983.

To prevent just such an exploitation of the civil plaintiffs have held four meetings to agree on their own approach.

Representing various victims, Jewish and non-Jewish, from Communists to rightists, they say they have worked out a strategy to keep the trial angled on the facts of atrocities committed under Barbie's anthority.

"We form a coherent but naturally not a homogeneous group," said Joë Nordmann, a Communist lawyer and a member of the Resistance.

The crimes against humanity charge requires the prosecution and the civil plaintiffs to prove Barbie's participation in tortures, massacres and deportations to Nazi concentration camps in 1943 and 1944.

The evidence against Barbie, presented in many books available in French bookshops and in interviews aired on television and radio, is abundant.

The portrait that comes out of the reminiscences of those who met him is a stereotype of a sadistic brute who resorted to torture and humiliation to gain information and punish his enemics

Wielding his favorite weapon, a whip made of bull's sinew, he would grind his boot into the faces of prisoners who had already lost consciousness, according to Lise Lesèvre, now 86. Mrs. Lesèvre described her arrest, torture and deportation to Ravensbrück concentration camp in a 1984 book, "Facing Barbie."

Mrs. Lesèvre, whose son and husband died in deportation, was interrogated by Barbie and his lieutenants for 19 days in 1944. She is expected to be among the first witnesses called to the stand after the trial's opening.

Another member of the Resistance, Ravmond Aubrac, has described regaining consciousness after bouts of torture. "Sometimes, coming round, I would see him with a woman on his knees, with lipstick on his shirt," Mr. Aubrac said. "He liked to demonstrate his power.'

A former German Army corporal, Alfons Glas, stated that he saw the SS officer punch a prisoner in the face until his mouth and nose

Then Barbie went to the piano and, with his loved and blood-stained hands, played the first bars of the song 'Parlez-moi d'amour.'

According to those who have seen Barbie in Saint-Joseph prison, there remains little of the

"We should not make this hangman into the arbiter of our quarrels or the judge of our history," a prominent World War II historian, trate in the case, a standard procedure in French criminal cases.

The stocky, arrogant Barbie described in To prevent just such an exploitation of the many memoirs is now an ailing old man who trial, the more than 40 lawyers representing 115 denies all connection with deportations of Jews. Serge Klarsfeld, a lawyer for families of Jewish victims and a Nazi-hunter who, with his wife, Beate, drew attention to the Barbie case, dismisses Barbie as a "coward." "He takes responsibility for nothing," Mr. Klarsfeld said, "It's pitiful. To hear him, he's the most innocent man who was in Lyon during Mr. Klarsfeld, who was involved in an unsuccessful plot to kidnan Barbie in 1973 from Bolivia, where he was living under the pseudonym of "Altmann," represents civil plaintiffs related to 44 Jewish children disp atched to Auschwitz in April 1944. All were killed. The children were hidden in a farmhouse in the village of Izien. A telex, signed by Barbie on April 6, 1944, announcing the completion of the deportation operation, is a major part of Mr. Klarsfeld's evidence. Barbie contests the autheaticity of the telex.

On Sunday, the eve of the opening of Bar-bie's trial, which is scheduled to last until June 30, the civil plain tiffs' lawyers will go by bus to Izicu, the first stop on a tour of places where Barbie is alleged to have committed crimes. The tour will end at Montluc prison in Lyon where resistance fighters were held. The lawyers' tour is intended as a public demonstration of their unity, despite the differences in the interests that they represent. It is not the only attempt to capture the media's attention. Lyon has decided to mount a promotion campaign, sending glossy brochures to accredited journalists to describe the city's channs and its potential for business.

In addition, a permanent exhibition on the Nati extermination is planned near the courthouse throughout the trial.

For Mr. Verges, Barbie's lawyer, such attempts to attract the media constitute a desire to turn the Barbie trial into "a Roman feast." In addition, the profusion of lawyers accusing Barbie will lead to a procedural disarray, he

Mr. Verges said that the presence of Communist lawyers made it almost certain that Barbie's recruitment by the Counter Intelligence Corps in the U.S. zone in Germany after the war would come under attack.

Barbic's recruitment as an informer and his eventual departure for Bolivia, with American help, were investigated by a U.S. government commission headed by Allan A. Ryan Jr. in

Mr. Klassfeld, on whose Pan's deak lies a copy of the Ryan report, added: "No one can do more to accuse the United States than the Americans have done themselves."

Another defense tactic will be to bring up allegations of French Army torture during the 1954-1962 Algerian war of independence. Mr. Verges has said he will ask why French torturers in Algeria have not been tried with crimes against humanity.

Mr. Nordmann said of this approach: "Just because some have got away with it does not mean all should."

A name that will be prominent throughout the trial although not really part of it will be that of Jean Moulin. Moulin, who died in 1943 after being captured and allegedly tortured by Barbic, was the representative of General Charles de Gaulle, the leader of the Free French Forces based in Britain.

De Gaulle had entrusted him with a liaison role between the various resistance groups to coordinate the struggle against the Germans.

Mr. Verges claims that Moulin committed suicide after learning that collaborators in the the Third Reich called the master Resistance had betrayed him. Responsibility race for Moulin's death was laid on Barbie in his second trial in 1954.

Because of the statute of limitations, the affair cannot legally be part of the new trial. The thesis that Moulin was berrayed by a fellow Resistance fighter is not new. Twice after the war, a suspect since named by Barbic, René Hardy, was tried and acquitted for his role in Moulin's betrayal and capture.

Many other members of the Resistance have never agreed that Mr. Hardy was innocent. Mr. Hardy, who traveled to Bolivia to confront Barbie in 1972, died last month in an old people's home in Normandy.

Of Barbie's treatment of Moulin, former Colonel Helmut Knochen of the SS, a member of a team that took over Moulin's interrogation, said the Gestapo was angered when it discov-The big names - they've mostcred Moulin's condition.

Vienna Meeting on Security Kesumes

VIENNA (Renters) — The Vienna European Security conference resumed negotiations Tuesday with Western countries pressing for action on human rights and the Soviet bloc insisting on the need for greater military security.

The 35 states in the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe are due to prepare a final document to further collaboration by July 31, and most delegations are hoping to stick to that deadline.

About 140 proposals have been so far put forward since the conference started in November and the West has concentrated on humanitarian, issues. East bloc states have proposed a second round of the Stockholm conference on European disarmament, which in September produced an accord on confidence-building measures, including exchange of information on military maneuvers.

THE 1987 ROLEX AWARDS FOR ENTERPRISE

The Rolex Awards for Enterprise were conceived in 1976 to provide help and encouragement in breaking new ground in the fields of Applied Sciences and Invention, Exploration and Discovery, and the Environment.

Since 1976, Rolex has awarded 20 individuals who have demonstrated a remarkable spirit of enterprise and commitment in their fields of endeavour.

An international panel of judges, in granting the Awards, has helped to bring to fruition many projects that might otherwise not have been realised.

Each of the five current winners, announced in Geneva on 30th April 1987, has received 50,000 Swiss Francs. Also, each winner has been presented with a specially inscribed gold Rolex. Chronometer, itself a symbol of enterprise and achievement.

To people cut off by the sea, a medical emergency is an emergency indeed. The islanders of the Maldives archipelago in the Indian Ocean, for example, may have to travel five days by boat to see a doctor. Jacques Autran and his colleague, a doctor, understood the problem from years of navigating in JACQUES AUTRAN various archipelagos. Their first step was to set up Marins sans Frontières. Their second was to acquire an appropriate boat. They found it: the Listan, a motor fishing vessel, bought for her worth as scrap metal.

It took four years to clean, rebuild and equip the Listan, using volunteers and salvaged materials. She now carries a small op ving theatre, a pharmacy with cold storage for vaccines, and a wellequipped laboratory.

Kress can now start recovery programmes for endangered species, such as the short-tailed albatross of Japan.

He looks forward to sharing his success with others concerned with disappearing seabird (USA) life around the world.

A SYSTEMATIC STUDY OF NEPALESE GROUND BEETLES.

Few entomologists are able to collect their insects from high mountain regions. But Pierre Morvan is a veteran mountain climber who practises wrestling to keep fit. As the number of professional entomologists declines, competent amateurs such as Morvan play an increasingly important role. His ERRE MORVAN achievements are the more remarkable because he finished his schooling at the age of fourteen. The processes that help to form biological species (speciation) are Morvan's special interest, with particular reference to ground beetles. Speciation is the result of an animal population's becoming isolated by some factor, usually geographic in the first place. Once geographically isolated, a population group will develop its own specific characteristics. For these reasons, the most valuable studies are done where the ecology and topography are highly varied and where there is a species that readily changes its form. Morvan's speciality, the ground beetles (Carabidae), meet these criteria well.

Thailand, for example, has a high percentage of Buddhists in its population. Yet the country suffers seriously from deforestation and has been stripped of almost 75 per cent of its vegetation in the last -10 years.

Under Nash's initiative, and with the full co-operation of the Dalai Lama, Buddhist groups are now studying their own scriptures for references to the interdependence of man and nature. Their findings will be used in educational books and films acceptable to the hundreds of millions of Buddhist faithful.

The Thailand project, reaching beyond the influence of governments and secular organisations. Navcy Nash will serve as a model for other lands (HONG KONG) and other faiths.

EXPLORING SACRED RUINS HIGH IN THE ANDES.

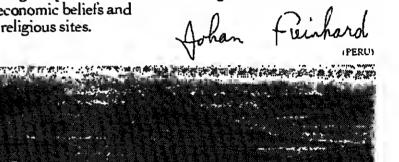

The world's highest ruins by far are found in the southern Andes. Nearly one hundred sites, predating the Spanish invasion of 1532, have been found above 5.200m - with some well-built structures up to 6.700m. They constitute one of the most awesome accomplishments that have survived from ancient OHAN REINHARD times.

Being almost inaccessible, only a few of these sites have been examined by anthropologists. Their origins, distribution and purpose were largely conjectured before Johan Reinhard began work in 1980. He has developed a subfield of anthropology; called highaltitude archaeology. Strangely, diving is one of his specialised techniques, for mountain lakes were often perceived as doors into the mountains where the gods dwelt.

Reinhard's findings indicate that mountain gods were believed to control the weather and, consequently, crop and animal fertility. The hypothesis - which his project is designed to test - is that the Incas built the sacred sites to help increase production, thereby strengthening the Inca state and its religion.

Reinhard's pioneering techniques in high altitude archaeology will greatly increase understanding of traditional Andean religio-economic beliefs and ancient religious sites.

A BUDDHIST PERSPECTIVE ON NATURE CONSERVATION.

Nancy Nash believes it is not enough to focus on biological problems and technical solutions in response to the world's crisis of disappearing nature. She feels that we are overlooking the cultural and social factors which have not only created the problem but which could also help provide a long-term solution to it.

The need for an environmental ethic caused Nash to consider Buddhist teachings, which seek to instil respect for all forms of life.

Focusing on Reagan

"What did the president know and when did he know it?" The 1973 Watergate hearings were already a month old when Senator Howard Baker, now President Reagan's chief of staff, coined the expression while cross-examining Richard Nixon's prime accuser, John Dean. The question resounded not only because of its ring but also its reach. America was watching. The same question hangs in the air this week as Congress launches its Iran-contra hearings. Whatever they disclose -facts and feelings - will once more be vastly magnified, for again America will be watching.

Already the Senate chairman, Daniel Inouye, has come remarkably close to charging the president with not only responsibility but guilt. The president knew, says the senator, that money was being raised to buy weapons for the contras in Nicaragua, But did he know that his White House staff was raising money for weapons when Congress had forbidden it and permitted at most bumanitarian aid? Mr. Reagan says he knew only generally that his subordinates were rallying private contributions for television ads supporting his Central American policies. Is the president solitting hairs, and even if he is, why make such a fuss about it? Because it is his constitutional duty to "take care that the laws be faithfully executed," including, laws he does not like or wants to ignore.

At a minimum. President Reagan failed to control his administration's attempts to circumvent Congress's ban on contra weapons. It is clear also that he deceived the public by sternly declaring a policy of no ransom for hostages while privately trading arms with Iran. His best defenses so far are negligence, ignorance, forgetfulness and perhaps self-deception. Each represents a failure to "take cure,"

Senator Inouye and others resist forecasts more dramatic than that only half the Irancontra story has yet been told. They seem prepared to educate the public on the contra and Mideast irregularities and to search for the legal norms that are supposed to prevent them. The task is formidable, not least because the questioners will include 11 senators and 15 representatives - compared with seven who asked the Watergate questions. For all the complexity and the rivalry, the magnifying glass finally will focus on one simple, awful question. Beyond what he knew, and when, it is: Does the president of the United States think he is above the law?

The Reagan-Nakasone Summit Has Come to Nothing

N EW YORK - As the dust set-tles from Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's trip to Washington, it can be appraised for what it was: a sad demonstration of the impotence of political leadership on both sides of the Pacific.

President Reagan's promotion of the "magic of the marketplace" has been seductive, but what he really bas done is sponsor loose budgets and tight money, which have led to the trade and budget deficits that have become the nation's No. 1 problem. And his quick fixes - quotas on imported machine tools, chip cartels and deliberate debasement of the dollar - may have sounded tough, but they all backfired, and now they are leading to more cockeyed ploys like the Gephardt amendment, just passed by the House, which would force America into an era of precipitous trade retaliation .....

Prime Minister Nakasone too, has had moments of flim-flam. His cheerleading sessions to get Japanese consumers to buy foreign goods were well-intended, even courageous. His friendship with Mr. Reagan became his principal political asset. But more valuable than international showmanship would have been his convincing his countrymen that their markets should be opened and their domestic economic engines should be used to help power world growth. The two men are proof that, in a world so tightly linked by economics and technology, those in charge must be able to deal on both domestic and foreign fronts at the same time.

Mr. Reagan may have had a touch for boosting domestic growth, but his neglect of the global dimension hay brought another set of problems. Thus, for example, be pushed for higher gross national product levels with easier money and tax reductions, secondly oblivious to the flood of imports or the half-a-trillion-dollar debt building up to foreigners. in another case, the administration drove a hard deal with Latin Ameriobjects to Japan's trade practices. can debts, forgetting that strangling The West European countries are Latin economies meant cutting back no less angry - and the major Euro- on U.S. export prospects.

In addition, he has never fully obtained the cooperation of his own bureaucrats. which means that his foreign policy initiatives never have achieved the credibility they needed to work.

Whatever chance there might have been for constructive alternatives to the present quagmire is now over, at least until a new president is up and running. Mr. Reagan is a lame duck. Mr. Nakasone is likely to be replaced well before Mr. Reagan retires, but the slow, consensus building process in Japan, plus Tokyo's deep-scated reluctance to take initiatives on its own, ensures that Japan will wait for 1989 before doing anything dramatic. Now the challenge for both governments will be damage limitation. For Washington, this means controlling the worst aspects of protectionism, including watering down the Gephardt amendment, trying to pre-vent a free fall of the dollar and deflecting a broad anti-Japanese backlash in America. For Tokyo, the need is to avoid the kind of protectionist acts for which the Japanese are infamous, and at least not to backslide on the more recent promises for faster growth, more imports and increased foreign aid.

Meanwhile, unrestrained market forces will rule by default. For America, now the world's largest debtor, the driving force will be the need to attract Japanese funds at reasonable rates. That objective will determine how the country manages interest rates and the dollar, costing it much

Africans Need Help in Their Bold Bid for Reform I NITED NATIONS, New York - In dra-

U matic moves, several African nations have been adopting bold and politically risky econom-ic reforms. From Ghana to Guinea, from Tanzania to Zambia, and from the Congo to Mozambique, the state is easing the hold it has exercised since the 1960s on economic activity. These reforms are widely considered indispens-able to the revival of growth on the continent. But the Western nations that pushed for such reforms, and which pledged to support them at a United Nations session on Africa last May, have given little sign of planning to furnish the resources these programs need if they are to succeed.

support in moving toward more open markets. The intensity and direction of reform vary. But across the continent, countries increasingly are: • Raising the prices they pay farmers for food (in order to boost production).

· Cutting back on government regulation of the economy (to allow market forces to determine prices and allocation of resources).

 Slashing public spending and employment (to balance the budget and redirect investment).
 And devaluing their currencies (to remove price distortions and increase rural incomes). These measures are expected to free up the most productive sectors in society, to encourage

Yes, Women Rotarians

The United States Constitution guarantees the right of free association. But the laws prohibit various forms of discrimination. What to do when these two great principles collide, when people choose to associate in a discriminatory way?

In 1984 the Supreme Court ventured into this muddy area in a case involving the Jaycees. That organization had a rule against admission of women. The state of Minnesota had a public accommodations law barring discrimination on various grounds, including sex. The Minneapolis-St. Paul Jaycees chapter decided to admit women, and the national Javcees organization tried to lift its charter. The court said the national group could not do it.

To reach their decision, the justices distinguished among various kinds of association. Among other things they suggested that the smaller the group and more private its purposes, the greater its freedom to exclude. They also said that religious groups and groups exercising free speech have particular protection. The Jaycees, they concluded, were none of these and therefore fair game. Now the court has realfirmed that decision in a case involving Rotary clubs. There are about 20,000 of these around the world. with about 900,000 members. They are basically, like the Jaycees chapters, service organizations that can also provide members with useful business contacts. The rules of Rotary International are that membership is open only to men. A defiant California chapter admitted three women; the international organization tried to revoke its charter; it resisted, citing a state public accommodations law. Rotary said the state law infringed on the First Amendment.

Maybe it "does work some slight infringement on Rotary members' right of expressive association," the justices said, but "that infringement is justified because it serves the state's compelling interest in climinating discrimination against women." Clearly that is so. The standards the court laid down in 1984 were sensible then and remain so. The Rotarians should grow up.

A NATO Weapons Agency

NATO's European members need a central agency to administer the research and procurement of standard weapons. The West is not short of innovation. But there is a desperate shortage of consistent, stable management of multinational programs.

A major obstacle to establishing a central entity to administer such programs is that the creation of new weapons is synonymous with clout. It is a way for politicians to be seen as decisive. Enemies are cautioned; jobs are created; and billions of pounds, marks and francs are poured into the effort. Governments are loath to surrender that kind of power. One solution is to establish the NATO agency below the political level - to implement major decisons, not make them.

A report prepared for NATO's Independent European Program Group proposes a research and procurement office to be operated much like the European Space Agency. its operations are funded on a percentage basis by the countries that benefit from its work. At present, every nation that buys a NATO weapon wants a share of its production. A central agency could parcel out the work based on open competition without regard to national borders.

Some discourage talk of such a NATO agency for fear it would become a tough competitor to the United States and be a divisive factor within the alliance. That is a false issue. Europeans already are devising a new generation of armaments independentily of the Pentagon.

greater private initiative and to hare investment Countries like Ghana, Tanzania and Guinea, once critical of such prescriptions, are now applying them vigorously. At least partly as a result such countries have seen large increases in food production, exports and manufactured goods.

But in the short run, millions of poor city dwellers may face intense suffering as food prices rise, wages fall, and governments lay off workers and reduce social services to trim spending. These are not easy sacrifices in Africa, the world's poorest region and the only one where incumes for the poor have fallen since 1962.

Hence there are political risks. Zambia was rocked by rioting in December, when the government doubled the price of maize meal, and President Kenneth Kaunda was forced to roll back what was being hailed as a model reform program. Willfied Thalwitz, a World Bank vice president, argues that without increased donor assistance, many African economies "just cannot respond to what are otherwise excellent new policies." The said. "I wish more developed-country representa tives had been there to see what is going on."

Unfortunately, some donors remain skeptical of the reforms. There is a perception that "the African crisis" is over. Many of those who responded with generosity to the recent famines are unaware that the underlying causes are still very much in place: low commodity prices, high debt and probems with the flow of resources.

There is an intense struggle being played out in Africa. If the reform movement falters in a few key countries, the process will lose credibility across the continent. Economic growth and development will be set back. The richer countries have little time left to commit the aid needed to back reforms they have been urging on Africa for years.

will stop the Japanese trade and investment juggernaut. With trade sur , pluses exceeding $100 billion lasyear, and with cumulative overseas investment having doubled between 1985 and 1986, Japan has built up too much momentum. But the outlook is not good.

Left alone, the markets will not deal gently with Tokyo either. Al-ready the Japanese stock market resembles a speculative bubble ready to explode. Debt: Politics for Politicians, Banking for Bankers damage to the entire financial system

By David O. Beim

N EW YORK -- Negotiations be-tween the world's major banks and less developed countries, mostly in Latin America, have become a Surely, the government ought not to stiff-arm approach: It has stopped all demage American institutions in an debt payments and all negotiations. more or less constant feature of the effort to assist foreign ones. For every economic landscape. Countries like Brazil, which seemed in good shape a year or two ago, may now be strug-gling to put their houses in order, equally, countries like Mexico, struggling a year or two ago, now seem to be in much better shape. The rise or fall of a particular country's fortunes results from factors within and outside its control. Brazil brought much of its misfortune on itself by converting an anti-infla-tion program, the Cruzado Plan, into a broad income-redistribution program. Wages were raised dramatically while prices were frozen, resulting, in devastating shortages, reduced exports and impaired reserves.

Conversely, some factors are external. The prices of primary products (food, energy, minerals) are outside national control and remain abnormaily low. Indeed, as the management expert Peter Drucker has pointed out, they are at their lowest levels in recorded history relative to the price of manufactured goods - a situation that causes economic and financial distress not only in Latin America but also in Texas and Iowa. Many politicians have developed a great urge to intervene. It would be nice to imagine that a bold new program could work. But political intervention could well make things worse. Some members of Congress propose that U.S. banks give a billion dollars to less developed countries through interest rate reductions and forgiveness of principal. This poses problems: 1. It would severely weaken the American banking system. It is not dollar of debt forgiveness, the banks' lending capacity would be reduced by about $16. Substantial write-offs by about $16. Substantia when thus could have a devastating effect on the growth of the U.S. economy. 2. It is unlikely that America woo recover such a remarkable gift through trade, Only a fraction of the money saved on debi payments would be spent on purchases of American ex-ports. Even if all of it were, the program is still a gift: If the United States gives away dollars to facilitate buying American goods, then it has, as a country, given away the goods. 3. This is by no means a U.S. issue clusively or even primarily. American banks hold less than one-quarter of all bank debt from less developed countries, the balance being primarily in Europe and Japan. America cannot dictate a global solution, but its politicians seem to overloak this. 4. Most fundamentally, this proposal undermines the tedious but utterly necessary process of restructuring and adjustment in less developed countries. Banks work hard 10 help them develop sensible economic goals. Impatience with this process will undermine the long-term benefits of the process.

If the chetoric is wrong, what is the reality? What if the government does not intervene? Will everything be O.K.? The reality is diverse. Countries differ greatly and frequently change policies, so a sweeping global formula is almost certain to be wrong. Reality is case by case.

Countries will try different strategies to see what works. Yes, Jews are sensitive to the suffering Arab refugees. But they also see the Arab role in the situation. vealed as submerged problems. You say — admit — that you love your mother? Sure, your kind always does. You fancy a new pair of shoes? How long have you had this fetish? You enjoy swimming in the ocean?

Fortunately, womb nostalgia is treatable. And the way you eat artichokes — well, we know what that means. Liberalism is especially good at turning the gold of enjoyment into the lead of guilt: How can you enjoy that lasa-gna, knowing about Bangladesh? (Axiom: People are hungry there because people are nourished here.)

Wild plants and animals provided bunter-gatherers a balanced diet. Agristarchy crops, and people became exposed to starvation if a crop failed. Today bushmen eat scores of wild plants. Paleopathology, the study of signs of disease in the remains of ancient peoples, has found evidence in scarred bones, in the teeth of Chilean mummies, in the feces of long-dead Nevada Indians and elsewhere that growth rates declined and malnutrition and disease increased when agriculture was adopted. Skeletons of Greek and Turkish hunter-gatherers indicate that modern Greeks and Turks still have not regained the average height of their hunter-gatherer ancestors.

The settled life of agriculture encouraged the growth of communities, which facilitated the spread of infectious diseases. Hunter-gatherers had oo concentrated food sources, so they had no sur-pluses, and thus had a classicss society. Agriculture produced disparities of wealth, and elites lording it over diseased masses. Women, who as huntergatherers had only the babies they could transport, were subjected to more preg-nancies to provide field hands.

Perhaps you are clinging to a fact that makes you feet good: Hunter-gatherers were so busy hunting and gathering that they had no time for culture - for the pleasure we derive from the Parthenon and the B-minor Mass. Mr. Diamond concedes that agriculture, by producing surpluses, made cities and culture possi-ble. But the cust has been considerable: starvation, disease, gross social and sexual inequality, tyranny, war.

So if anything is giving you pleasure, you do not understand. And if the fact that you don't understand doesn't disturb your screnity, we know why that is.

Blame It All on Cheery Beer

MANY a debt-burdened farmer must be asking himself these days wby his ancestors ever gave up the relatively carefree life of the hunter-gatherer. The answer, according to one anthropologist, is beer --- which probably developed acci-dentally after uncultivated wheat or barley had been soaked in water to make gruel. Left out in the open, this mixture turned into a dark, somewhat carbonated beverage that was notritious and made drinkers of it feel a little better. ## Violations At Embassies Not Limited To Marines

By Elaine Sciolino New York Times Service WASHINGTON - The State Department is investigating several cases in which U.S. diplomats in sensitive posts may have violated rules against unauthorized socializing with foreigners, according to a high-ranking State Department official.

The official, Robert E. Lamb, the assistant secretary of state for administration and security, said Monday that the diplomats might be reassigned or recalled.

He also said that the State Department and other U.S. agencies investigated more than 10 embassy staff members every year because of unauthorized socializing with foreign employees and residents. "By and large, career diplomats recognize overtures for what they are and report them." he said,

"When an employee doesn't recognize them for what they are," Mr. Lamb said, "he or she will be invesugated and transferred."

Such cases are kept secret in accordance with privacy laws. But Mr. Lamb said secrecy was also important to avoid creating a climate in which employees would be afraid to admit unauthorized socializing.

The problem is more widespread than is generally acknowledged and extends far beyond the recent incident in which two Marine guards posted in Moscow have been charged with allowing Soviet agents into the most sensitive areas of the U.S. Embassy.

The Marines were reportedly involved with Soviet women who worked at the embassy.

"It's not just the Marines." Mr. Lamb said, "The Soviets will target anyone they can."

He said that Soviet-bloc and Communist-dominated nations used socializing both inside and outside their borders as an espionage technique.

The degree of social contact allowed between U.S. embassy employees and local residents varies with the sensitivity of the post and the perceived extent of a threat.

Legitimate business contacts are allowed, but social contacts in Soviet-bloc countries and some Communist-dominated countries are severely limited.

Administration officials said that the nature and extent of the social contact depended to a large degree on the attitude of the individual ambassador.

Big Bang in the North Sea: Revisionist Challenges Isle's View of Its Near-Destruction

By James M. Markham New York Times Service

HELGOLAND, West Germany -Before setting off the biggest nonnuclear explosion in history, the British detonated a small one so that the birds of Helgoland Island would be frightened away and not be killed in Operation Big Bang. There had been protests from British bird watchers.

Then, at the third beep announcing the I P.M. news on April 18, 1947, an apocalyptic explosion shook this dimin-utive North Sea island as 6,700 tons of bombs and ammunition in 14 miles (23 shells. kilometers) of bunkers and tunnels went up in a black musbroom cloud that had been warned to open their windows curled 6,000 feet (about 1,800 meters) into the sky.

Helgoland's history is a series of friendly and unfriendly changes of hand involving its strategic location. In 1807, imperial Britain pushed Denmark off the island to use it to smuggle goods past Napoleon's trade blockade.

Italy Issues Warrants in Bank Scandal

MILAN (AP) — Milan judges investigating Italy's biggest bank-ing scandal issued arrest warrants on Tuesday for 25 board members and officials of Banco Ambrosiano.

One of the judges, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed the widely expected action and said no one had yet been taken into custody. The trial is expected to begin next fall. Some of the 25 charged with being "accessories to fraodulent bankruptcy" do not live in Italy. Those named in the warrants issued Tuesday included an Italian financier, Orazio Bagnaco; Roberto Rosone, a top aide to Ambro-siano's chairman, Roberto Calvi; a Milan lawyer, Giuseppe Prisco; a Venetian industrialist, Mario Valeri Manera, and Carlo Von Casterlberg, a Swiss citizen who is president of a Zurich-based finance company, Ultrafin A.G. Mr. Calvi was found hanging from a London bridge in June 1982, two months before the bank collapse. Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus an American, and two senior officials of the Vatican bank were named in warrants issued by the same Milan judges in February.

The three, Archbishop Marcinkus, Luigi Mennini and Pellegrino De Strobel, live in Vatican City, which has the status of a foreign state and no extradition treaty with Italy. They have not been arrested. Banco Ambrosiano collapsed in 1982 following the failed repay-ment of $1.2 billion in loans made by the bank to 10 Latin American dummy companies controlled by the Varican bank.

The Chinese leader reportedly said that China had been changing in the past eight years but that it would take 70 years for the country to reach the standard of living France now enjoyed. China launched a program of economic reforms, characterized by its opendoor policy, in 1979.

Mr. Deng made no reference to a political crisis that erupted in Chi-na in mid-January following the forced resignation, of the Communist Party secretary- general, Hu Yaobang, the source said.

The crisis reflected a party clasb between reformist supporters of Mr. Deng and conservatives opposed to the pace and timing of the reforms.

Last week, in similar remarks to Spain's visiting deputy prime minster, Alfonso Guerra González, Mr. Deng was quoted as saying that the "principal struggle" that still had to be fought in China was against the "lefusm" inherited from the Cultural Revolution. He said that "mertia" in the party remained from that period and was bolding back reforms.

Observers bere said then that his remarks had raised oew questions about who was gaining in the struggle between the right and left in the party.

A Star Turn Shylock

By Sheridan Morley tional Herald Tribune NTONY SHER returns to the A Royal Shakespeare Company at Stratford for the first time since his spidery "Richard III" to offer a no-less-flamboyant Shylock in "The Merchant of Vepice." Again his director is Bill Alexander, and again they have gone for an unashamed star turn that leaves the rest of the company at a consider-able disadvantage. Whether it is that the RSC, now somewhat thinly spread across no less than nine Stratford and London stages, cannot muster enough character actors of stature, or simply that Sher, like Olivier before him, reduces most of his fellow players to mere specta-tors, only John Carlisle in the title role manages a performance that is even remotely in the same league. Which is a pity, because beyond Sher's bearded and turbaned street On the small Stratford stage at The Other Place, the RSC has a trader in secured loans the production is hallmarked by a central and very strong notion of racial hatred. Beneath a Star of David, this Shylock chants Hebrew verses while a thuggish Venetian crowd Jew-baits him with truly Nazi fervor, and the news on the Rialto is of fear and loathing long before the trial scene. ## 'Stone Guest' Returns

By Henry Pleasants

L'ONDON — Alexander Dargomizhsky's "The Stone Guest" has been L'called "the most influential failure in the history of opera." It's probably true, which explains why all but a very few of those hearing the new production by the English National Opera at the Coliscum will never previously have heard a note of it — and are unlikely ever to hear another after it finishes its run oo May 21. It also explains why it has taken 115 years to reach a British audience.

life, more realistic, than the conventional operatic seequence of recitative, 5% aria, duet, trio, ensemble and chorus, which he found artificial, contrary to the norms of human behavior, and prone to exploitation by singers indulging in the display of vocal virtuosity at the expense of drama. He chose, accordingly, a kind of arioso vocal line shaped to the accents, inflections and cadences of Pushkin's Russian verse, eschewing --- with two inconsequential exceptions — any suggestion of the operatic "set picce." It reads better than it works. Tchaikovsky recognized the flaw: "If anything is more hateful and false," he wrote in his diary, "than attempting to introduce "truth" into a realm of art where everything is based on 'pseudo,' and where 'truth' in the usual sense of the word is completely useless - I do not know it."

"The Stone Guest," unfinished at the composer's death, and completed by Cesar Cui with Rimsky-Korsakov attending to the instrumentation, is not hateful, but neither is it musically rewarding. It needs all the help it can get from the staging, and in Keith Warner's production it gets a lot, imes too much. It gets spleadid help, too, from Graham Clark as Don Juan, Sally Burgess as the courtesan Laura and Kathryn Harries as Donna Anna (here the Commander's widow, not his daughter).

One is grateful for the opportunity to hear "The Stone Guest" rather than just read about it, but the ENO has, possibly unwittingly, underscored Tchaikovsky's point in pairing it in repertoire with its Jonathan Miller production of Mozart's "Don Giovanni." The English translation is by Joan Rodgers and Paul Daniel, the latter also the conductor. It is no disparagement of the translation to say that because Dargomizhsky's vocal utterance is so wedded to Pushkin, what we have simply does not and cannot sound right. And because of the avoidance of musically self-sufficient set pieces, the loss is irremediable. F Further performances May 9, 14, and 21.

INTERNATIONAL MANAGER

Mobile Managers Are Myth: Most MBAs Stay at Home

By SHERRY BUCHANAN

<sup>atio</sup>nal Herald Tribune ONDON -- Surprisingly, the average person graduating with a masters degree from a top European business school stays on home ground. More predictably, those graduates earn as much as and often more than a middle manager in their sector, and they still prefer glamorous jobs in management consulting and investment banking to jobs in industry and manufacturing, according to a survey.

Even though the top European business schools stress career opportunities with international companies and attract recruiters mainly from multinationals to their campuses, the majority of their graduates take jobs at home, a trend that placement officers expect to continue this year. Although he did not detail the

that a mass-circulation newspaper

However, Mr. Sabouret denied reports that Hachette might be joined in launching a new newspa-per by the British press baron, Robert Maxwell, and Francis Bouygues, the head of Bouygues SA, the big French construction concern.

"Companies are generally looking for nationals to work in their OWD Countries

Problems with work permits, the high cost of using expansite instead of local managers and the availability of talented home-grown managers are factors that continue to encourage compa-nies to hire German MBAs for West Germany and French MBAs for France. Such companies may send the managers abroad only after a two-year stint at headquarters.

"Eighty-five percent of the students graduating from INSEAD go back to their home country and work from the company's head office in the international area," said Hans Detlef Werner, professor of international personnel management at INSEAD, the European Institute of Business Administration in Fontainebleau, France.

"There is no European price for MBAS," said Mr. Werner, who surveyed the careers and salaries of 164 MBAs who graduated from the school last year. "The labor market is a national one. The idea of a highly mobile MBA is a myth."

The percentage of MBAs staying home is even higher at some other business schools. Last year, only eight graduates out of 102 from London Business School went to work overseas.

According to the INSEAD survey, MBAs working in West Germany and Switzerland earn the most money. Their annual salaries average 101,385 DM (about $57,000) and $7,500 Swiss francs ($60,300). They were followed by MBAs in France, who earn an average of 299,570 French francs ($50,600), and manag-ers in Britain, who earn £28,063 (about $48,800). ers in Britain, who earn £28,963 (about $48,800).

Of the 1986 graduates, 52 percent reported at least a 40 percent increase in real income after following the nine-month program at INSEAD, and 19 percent reported a doubling of their salary. According to placement officers, MBAs graduating this year continue to be more attracted by management consulting and investment banking, which tend to offer higher salaries than industry. Last year, 26 percent of MBAs from INSEAD went into management consulting, as did 32 percent of IMEDE's graduates and 27 percent of graduates from London Business School.

"The reasons MBAs keep going into consulting are obvious," said Mr. Werner of INSEAD. "Management consultants pay well, the jobs are interesting and the consulting firms are good recruiters who outline good career possibilities.

NEW YORK - The dollar fell against most currencies in Europe on Tuesday, touching an all-time low against the Swiss franc, but rebounded in New York on rumors of large Japanese buying in the three-year Treasury note auction. The decline in Europe came despite modest intervention by the Bundesbank and Swiss National Bank. Some dealers said there were continued fears that the U.S.-Japan meeting last week had done little to solve the trade dispute. But in New York, "the dollar got some strength from indications that the three-year note auction went better than expected," said Marc Cohen, vice president at Re-public National Bank of New York. "There still is some bearish sentiment for the dollar, hut we've

Reserves of Gold, Currency Rise Sharply in U.K.

LONDON - Britain's gold and currency reserves rose $2.91 billion in April, the second-largest increase ever, the Treasury said Tuesday.

The rise, following an in-crease of $1.8 billion in March, was expected to prompt the Bank of England to lower interest rates.

The rise was higher than market forecasters expected. They had predicted an increase of $1.5 billion to $2 hillion. The rise in April's underlying reserves represents the sixth consecutive monthly increase and was the largest since a rise of $3.04 billion in October

tral hank had "no impact on markets," one trader in Zurich said. "We believe that the Swiss National Bank bought only $5 million, which is next to nothing, and the Bundeshank intervention was also small."

In early New York trading, the dollar began to recoup its losses after Edward Kelley, a Texas investment adviser who is a nomined to the Federal Reserve's board of governors, said in a Senate confirmation hearing that he believed the dollar was at an appropriate level, He also said that open market intervention was a suitable tool for counteracting volatility in exchange rates.

Meanwhile, the Fed vice chairman, Manuel Johnson, said that world exchange markets were nearing a stabilization and that a further fall in the dollar could be counterproductive.

In London, the dollar closed at 1.7865 DM, down from 1.7840 Fri-day; at 138.59 yen, down from 140.70; at 1.4535 Swiss francs, See DOLLAR, Page 17

International Herald Tribune PARIS - The venerable Ledoyen restaurant off the Avenue des Champs Elysées is to be managed by the fashion house Yves Saint Laurent under the terms of its recent purchase by the holding company Cerus SA.

A Cerus spokesman said Toes-day that Ledoyen will be run directly by Yves San Laurent's presi-

Iberia has made fast friends of business travellers all over the globe. Each year, in fact, we fly mare than 13 millian people, travelling a total of mare than 9,200,000 miles. Ta 81 different cities throughout the world. We know that to many a weary business flyer, the haurs they spend with us an-board are frequently the any restful hours they will spend that day. Which is why Iberia's "Business Class" welcomes travellers with that special touch that turns a routine business trip into a pleasurable jaumey.

A select bottle of fine wine from Iberia's reknown wine cellar-in-ihe-sky. A kind gesture, like offering a soft pillow and cozy blanket. Our new catering service that is always accompanied by a warm smile and gracious style. These are the elements that create that very special atmosphere on-board an Iberia flight. Turning Ibena's Business Class into a world class flying experience.

The next time you fly, ask your Travel Agent about Iberia. You could not make a more sound business decision.

THE BEST CONNECTIONS IN THE WORLD MEAN NOTHING IF AN AIRLINE FORGETS THE HUMAN ONE.

To Japan, Reversing Trend

DETROIT - After decades of getting bashed by imports, Ameri-can steelmakers are turning the tables on their biggest foreign rival. Buoyed by a falling dollar and by cost-cutting measures that have made them far more competitive, they are starting to export U.S.made steel in large quantities to Japan for the first time in memory. Industry executives acknowledged that their ability to export steel to Japan, which traditionally has been the largest single exporter of steel to the United States, is due largely to the 73 percent rise in the Japanese ven against the dollar in the past 19 months.

This makes American goods cheapet in Japan and Japanese prod-ucts more expensive in the United States.

USX Corp., the largest American steelmaker, is now preparing to have its steel certified fot entry into Japan by the Japanese govern-ment, its chairman. David M. Roderick, said Monday. The company plans to ship 20,000 to 40,000 tons of steel from its works in Gary, Indiana. 10 Japan in 1987.

Officials of Bethlehem Steel Corp. said Monday that the company began to export steel to Japan last November. Industry sources said that Bethlehem shipped about 30,000 ions of low-grade steel to Japan in November and January.

Although they represent a dramatic turnaround, the American steel exports to Japan will be small compared to Japan's steel shipments to the United States, which totaled 4.4 million tons in 1986.

U.S. 3-Year Note Auction Said to Reflect Lukewarm Demand The anctions are widely being viewed as a test of Japanese institutional investors' interest WASHINGTON — The U.S. Treasury's auction Tuesday of $10 billiop worth of threein U.S. Treasury securities, and their view on

It helping the United States to finance its budget The yield reflected lukewarm demand, analysis said, and did not bode well for the $9.75

But the dollar's sharp fall against the yen has dampened Japanese enthusiasm, analysts said, despite yields at least 5 percentage points higher on 10-year U.S. government securities comnotes were trading at a higher price to yield 7.85 pared with comparable Japanese issues. Traditionally, the three-year notes have been purchased largely by U.S. banks. The Japanese institutional investors, attempting to buy assets to match their long-term liabilities, have usually focused on the longer-dated securities.

The three-year issue carried a semiannual interest rate of 7% percent, with an average price of 99.908 on a face value of 100. There were $22.96 billion in bids for the $10 billion in notes on offer, meaning that the Treasury "covered" the amount by just over 2-1, which is not considered strong demand for a three-year note.

The Treasury was forced to accept 26 percent of the bids at the higher rate of 7.94 percent. The difference of three hundredths of one percentage point between the highest and average yields is also considered a lukewarm response.

AN INSULAR POSSESSION

By Timothy Mo. 593 pages. $19.95. Random House, 201 East 50th Street, New York, N. Y. 10022.

Reviewed by Jonathan Yardley T are, the immensely gifted young British writer Timothy Mo made his American debut two years ago not with his first novel but his second: "Sour Sweet," an irresistible book about a Chinese family living in London and learning — among many other things — how to cope with the alien Western culture. "Sour Sweet" was enthusiastically reviewed in the United States, acquired a small but ardent readership, and aroused much curiosity about Mo's first novel, provocatively if enigmatically titled "The Monkey King." Now Mo's first novel and his third, "An insular Possession," have been published by two American houses. They turn out to be works of strikingly different character, though both deal with Mo's persistent theme of East-West cultural dissimilarities. Readers who took pleasure in "Sour Sweet" will find themselves in familiar territory in "The Monkey King," another novel about Chinese domestic life. "An Insular Possession," on the other hand, is a sprawling, ambitious historical novel whose central characters are Americans and whose narrative method is calculatedly - indeed, parent determination not to repeat himself, but to venture into new and risky territory. "The Monkey King" and "Sour Sweet," though different in many particulars, have much in common: Not merely does each depict a Chinese family coming to terms with the West, but each is about a marriage that begins with discomfort and suspicion yet slowly warms into mutual respect and even love; further, each is written with a deft blend of affection and wry dispassion that produces a jaunty, distinctive tone. Though these first two novels are essentially

"I don't mean to sound defeatist, but there is going to be drug use," said Larry Fleisher, president of the players' union in the National Basketball Association, "You're not going to eliminate it. All we can do is try to better the eitualion.

The conclusion that cocaine has probably joined rotator-cuff injuries, torn ligaments and broken bones as a notwithstanding, it has dealt fairly effectively with the potential occupational hazard for athletes comes at a time when the drug has propelled top players from all three major sports into the headlines.

Three current and two former members of the NBA's Phoenix Suns were indicted on cocaine charges and another Phoenix player, Walter Davis, entered a treatment facility

Gooden, the forcement officials and others who have dealt with cocaine boyish superstar in his first two dazzling seasons, had

That feeling of inevitability is also fed by the fact that the recent incidents are only the latest in what historians may remember as the cocaine decade in sports. Since 1980, more than 100 professional football, basketball and baseball players have publicly admitted using cocaine, with most entering addiction-treatment centers. Two prominent athsional sports. And league and union officials letes, basketball's Len Bias and football's Don Rogers, died concede that other athletes have become addicted and sought treatment without the public's knowledge.

Through it all the public has remained loyal, leading sports executives to have confidence that the issue is no ger as threatening as it once was.

The belief that cocaine is here to stay does not mean drug use. Virtually all condemn it.

Rather, the conclusion has been reached in part because each of the sports believes that, the recent outbreaks problem. Representatives from each sport, those in the players' unions included, say that the elaborate, expensive programs established to combat drugs, including security agents around the country and the suspension of athletes violating drug laws, have prevented the problem from being far worse. But Ueberroth, who drew criticism a year ago for saving that basehall was "virtually a drug-free sport." said he has recently fined "some teams" $250,000 for failing to report information about drug use among players. He declined to identify the teams.

But the conclusion about the permanent status of cocaine in sports also reflects a sense of frustration, a belief that further progress is impossible without more cooperation from others in and out of the sports establishment. lo some cases, that frustration centers on union-management disputes. In others, it is aimed at the failure of the federal government to come to grips with what has often been called a drug epidemic.

The history of how sports leagues have dealt with confidence that drug use in their sport bad decreased the problem. After a time, with neither the far-reaching proposals implemented nor the doorn realized, there "It is drastically reduced now," said Peter Ueberroth. comes a growing acceptance that even if the problem drew a combined total of 73,160,105. compared with more modest measures.

That syndrome has played itself out on the cocainesports scene largely around the issue of mandatory testing. While both Ueberroth and Rozelle tried to get it for all players, neither has persuaded the players' union, save for one scheduled test for all foothall players in training camp. While Rozelle says he believes increased tests would be an "important tool" to fighting drug use and is still pressing on the issue, Ueberroth says he no longer believes adespread testing is necessary.

"I don't think mandatory testing for all baseball players is desirable." Ueberroth said last week.

Instead of testing, the leagues increasingly cite education, peer pressure and the threat of banishment - which each uses, under different rules - as reasons for believing that fewer players are using cocaine. But some players are not sure how many of their peers are using cocaine.

"It should he on the decline, considering the consequences." said Don Baylor of the Boston Red Sox. "But sometimes I wonder if players realize what's going on. You don't even know if the guy in the next locker is doing drugs." Buck Williams of the New Jersey Nets said some players protected others who were using drugs. "There's a code of silence," Williams said, adding that the indictments in Phoenix, based largely on Walter Davis's testimony, might force new attitudes.

Perhaps another reason the leagues have accepted the inevitability of some drug use is that the sports have weathered the scandals that have erupted to date.

Instead of watching the public's being driven away by

The commissioners believe that public opinion is mixed on how to treat individual drug users.

"My mail is 50-50." Ueberroth said. "Half think I'm too tough, half think I'm not tough enough." "The public doesn't speak with one voice," said David Stern, the NBA commissioner, "Some boo, some cheer, some cry.

But, the commissioners say, what the public demands is t sense that the leagues are dealing with the problem. They want it cleared up," Rozelle said. "but fans are also anxious to forgive."

One result of that sense is how the commissioners view the drug problem now. Ueberroth, who said in 1985 that drug use was his sport's most serious problem, now puts such routine business matters as finances, structure and planning at the top of the list.

"Initially, we went through a period of 'Oh, my goodness gracious." " Stern said of basketball's reaction in the late 1970s and early 1980s. "Now we know it's a reflection of what's going on in society. Sure it's a problem for us. But it's not the threatening problem it was."

By far the most common observation among sports executives is that the use of drugs among athletes reflects the problem in society as a whole. Last year, statistics compiled by the National Institute on Drug Abuse showed that more than 22 million Americans have reported using cocaine.

There is no real surprise among sports league and union executives that all the education and other measures have failed to completely stop the problem, given that society is bedeviled by other problems that seem easier to solve.

UEFA Cup's Frugal Finalists Made the Others Pay

International Herald Tribune LONDON - Soccer abounds with lapdogs Pavlovian in their responses to coaches' orders. At this time of year, countless of there run victory laps of honor. But genuine Lapps as sporting heroes? There are a couple. Tord and Tommy Holmgren came down from Polokournas, a village near the Arctic Circle, to join IFK Göteborg 10 years ago. the Göteborg strategy. Two slight mellowings in him have released the team of late: He has stopped shouting them on from the dugout, has stopped, as he admits, "treating them as puppets."

And he has allowed humor to interrupt his ferocious intensity. Players have been astonished at the relaxed mood on away trips of their tectotal, nonsmoking boss, a 48-year-old cardiac victim-in-themaking.

The secret? The press. Those disruptive scribes challenged McLean and his staff to matches against the media, which lead to lopsided scores in McLean's favor and a recent hand-written notice from him: "Press team takes done test - result, 11 dones." The difference between the two

OBSERVER File Under Whatnot

By Russell Baker NEW YORK — A oew fad is making lists of things about which every badly educated American should know just a tiny little bit. I disappreve.

I was taught that a little learning is a dangerous thing. As a result, I refuse to learn just a little bit about anything. My policy is: Learn a lot, or nothing at all.

For instance, I probably know more about Hannibal's strategy for smashing the Roman center at the Battle of Cannae than is absolutely oecessary to succeed in most lines of work, especially professional wrestling and journalism, but I refuse to learn what Vanna White is.

When this very question came up for decision, it was quickly settled. By pursuing the Vanna White in-quiry. I realized, I might end up ing even more about Vanna know White than I knew about Hannibal at Cannae.

"Depressing," I said to myself. "Better give it the whatnot treatment," This refers to my method of determining whether a typically educated American should be rated civilized or hopeless. The test is not whether you know what something is, but whether you know what it is □ . The civilized person, for instance, may oot know what "soul food" is but he knows what it is not. He knows it is not a group of rock musicians. With the whatnot method you can survive American life without being exposed as an ignoramus. As you would be if somebody said, "Let's get some soul food," and you replied, "It would be a waste of money because the stereo is broken."

In the same way, it is enough to know that Vanna White is not a shade of house paint.

Theo Lippman Jr., writing oo this subject in The Baltimore Sun, guesses that many products of American schools would not know who Pontius Pilate was or understand a reference to "The Flying Dutchman."

Why should we? Though a bit foggy myself about "The Flying Dutchman," I am never uneasy when the subject comes up because I know what "The Flying Dutch-man" is not; namely, Henry Kis-

Lippman suspects more Ameri-cans know that "The Twilight Zone" is an old television show than know that Pontius Pilate was the Roman governor who approved the legal proceedings that condemned Jesus. If so, I would be astonished. For years I have heard people with bulging eyeballs speak of "The Twilight Zone" and have known that they were not talking about a pass defense used in the National Football League.

On Pontius Pilate I am extremely well versed and harbor strong opinions which I like to expound when comparing Pilate's character to Hannibal's, but I do not insist that others know anything about him except that he was oot the Roman general whom Hannibal defeated at Cannae.

Bot similarity to the past ends there. Almost all the players on the field came of age since Nigeria gained its independence in 1960. Yet the oew generation has em-braced the old colonial sport as its own.

With his gold cuff links, tailored London shirt and business card printed "Solicitor," Ogunbanjo seems to represent the new generation of athletic and affinent Nigerians drawn to the ancient sport.

A Saturday afternoon game at the Lagos Polo Club: A new generation of Nigerians has embraced the ancient colonial sport as its own.

Play and Politics Meet at Lagos Polo Club

Founded in the 1930s, the polo club here has become Nigeria's largest; it has 55 playing members, as against about 20 in 1980. An additional 300 nonplaying members bolster the club's reputation as a meeting ground for Nigeria's political and so-cial elite.

Each February, the nine-day tourna-ment is the major social event in Lagos. After the games, elegantly turned-out men and women flock to a string of parties — Jazz Night, Calypso Night, etc.

"The beautiful women come out like bees to honey," said the club's secretary, known simply as Toks. Sponsors for the tournament's 12 trophies and the advertisers in its brochure include many of Nigena's largest banks, insurance companies and industrial enterprises.

The social cachet of polo is underlined by a new televisioo and billboard campaign for a beer company. In the advertisements, a triamphant polo player surround-ed by admiring women holds a trophy.

In such a setting, Nigerian polo takes on a political undercurrent. The polo grounds are across a street from Dodan Barracks, the command center of Nigeria's military government. And important political fig-ures have on occasion delended the club's casis of greenery and privilege from the pressure of a mushrooming Third-World city. "At one time we had a lot of anti-polo people - people who thought it was straw-bernies and cream," recalled Ahmadu Yakubu, the secretary of Kaduna Polo Club and one of Nigeria's highest-rated players."

In the 1970s, a state governor proposed turning the polo field into a low-income bousing development. An infloential northern general, who was also the father of a top player, decisively quashed the idea. Polo's political clout stems from a similarity between officials in the military government and the country's top polo players; many are Moslems from the north.

"We are born with horses - we grow up riding without saddles," said Idris Ibrahim, a northerner and the captain of the Lagos

Club. Indeed, a northern atmosphere prevails among the club's bastling comm DURITY of grooms, stableboys, farriers and grass sellers. The high woven hats of the northerners are a frequent sight, and banter in Hausa, the lingua franca of northern Nigeria, is in the air.

The president of the Lagos Chub, Bello Ahmed, said he grew up riding horses in the northern city of Kano. "The youth in the south are now picking it up," Ahmed said of his club, where 60 percent of the player-members are northerners.

Members of the Lagos Polo Club have started importing Argentine ponies, con-sidered fleeter and more agile than Nigerian ponies, which are closer to Sudanese and Arab breeds.

Noting that "polo is 75 percent pony," Toks said the new breeds are improving Nigerian play. But despite the fresh blood of horse and man, Nigeria ranks below the world's top polo powers: Argentina, the United States, Britain and Mexico. Players here keep np with international play by circulating video cassettes of classic tournaments.

Addiction to polo has proved to be as strong in Nigeria as it is in other countries. A recent yearbook of the Nigerian Polo Association printed this memorial: "In loving memory of our dearty departed col-league, His Excellency Alhaji Shehu Mu-hammed Kangiwa, the late Governor of Sokoto State, whose tragic death occurred on the 17th of November, 1981, during the 1981 Keduna Annual Polo tourname nt. He died while playing polo with a handicap of plus 3."
